

A Self-Assessment for Future Private Jet Flight Attendants

This checklist is not about skills alone. It's about readiness, mindset and professional alignment.

Professional Mindset

- I am comfortable working in discreet, high-responsibility environments
- I understand that trust is earned through consistency, not performance
- I can remain calm, composed and professional under pressure
- I take ownership without needing constant supervision

Service & Standards

- I naturally anticipate needs rather than wait for instructions
- I pay attention to details others may overlook
- I understand the difference between good service and refined service
- I respect privacy and boundaries instinctively

Communication & Presence

- I communicate clearly, calmly and with intention
- I am confident without being dominant or performative
- I adapt my tone and behaviour to different personalities
- My presence feels reassuring and professional

Background Alignment

- I come from, or resonate with, environments such as aviation, customer care or luxury service
 - I understand the importance of discretion, reliability and consistency
 - I value professionalism over visibility
-

Career Readiness

- I am realistic about the demands of private aviation
 - I am prepared to invest in my professional development
 - I am looking for a long-term career path, not a quick change
 - I am open to guidance, mentoring and continuous improvement
-

Reflection

If you answered “yes” to most of these statements, private aviation may be a natural next step for you.

If some areas felt uncomfortable or unclear, that is not a limitation — it is an opportunity for preparation and growth.

Next Step

If you would like guidance, clarity or structured mentoring:

Book a discovery call or contact:

Martina Vincenzi

ask@privatejetcoach.com

www.privatejetcoach.com